COURSE SYLLABUS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This is an advanced level of study of the practice of marital and family therapy. Emphasis is placed on various techniques used in the field of marriage and family therapy. Special emphasis will be placed on practical skills of intervention as well as functioning, developing and implementing a therapeutic treatment plan. As part of this course, students will also begin the process of developing their own systematic model of change and personal theory of marital therapy.

OBJECTIVES

This course is designed to enable students:

1. To examine the various methods and techniques used in MFT.
2. To develop skill in the use of various methods and techniques of MFT.
3. To develop interventions based on appropriate assessment.
4. To demonstrate certain therapeutic skills and behaviors in both role-play and actual counseling situations.
5. To integrate the student's repertoire of MFT skills with their own personal model of MFT.
6. To develop skill in conceptualizing actual counseling session dynamics in order to construct appropriate interventions as well as to provide helpful feedback to the therapist.
7. To think "systematically" and to begin to conceptualize the family as an integrative system, including such issues as family structure and process, personality and role development, triangulation, myths, secrets, power and change.
8. To conceptualize child and adolescent misbehaviors within a preventive/developmental framework and to aid the student in conceptualizing parent/child problems systematically.
9. To understand the unique aspects of the marital system, including boundaries, power, intimacy and confidentiality and how these issues can be used to establish treatment goals, improve communication and enrich the marital relationship at each stage of therapy.
10. To know how to effectively deal with clinical issues that present themselves in marriage or family therapy.

METHODOLOGY

The course will be conducted as a seminar in which all students participate and contribute ideas and concepts. Role playing and modeling may be part of the course. Instruction will be in the form of didactic lecture, as well as incorporating videos of various family experts demonstrating their interventions. Discussions of the text and in-class projects will be expected.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Pre-Course Readings: Please read His Needs Her Needs before the first day of class. Read Chapters 1 & 2 In Procedures in Marriage & Family Therapy.

Pre-course work:

Book Critique-Student will submit a two paged, typed, doubled-spaced reaction paper to the required text, His Needs, Her Needs, by W. F. Harley. Instructor is interested in student's opinion of the author's premise, his recommendations and conceptualizations. Please feel free to state your opinions and/or objections. This is an opinion paper. DUE DATE: First day of class, June 16th.

1. Attendance and Participation: Daily attendance and active participation in class discussions is expected. Class sessions provide opportunities to personally evaluate theories and techniques and see connections between ideas, for which simply copying someone else's notes is not an equivalent experience. Because each class contains elements of marriage counseling that may not be repeated elsewhere, I prefer that you not miss any classes. Serious illness is grounds for an excused absence, as long as you notify the instructor that you will be ill. Unexcused absences may result in the reduction of a letter grade. Three tardies count as one unexcused absence.

Each day an LPC review quiz sheet will be handed out. You must be on time to receive the "quiz" This "quiz" will have questions on MFT that will closely resemble those types of questions from a Master Review and Tutorial for the NCE. The correct answer will be given and discussed. This will give you a test bank of at least 75 practice questions for the LPC exam. Late quizzes can not be made up.

2. Daily Journal: Each student will keep a daily journal entry reflecting on his or her experiences/learning/issues related to that day's particular class. In particular, interaction with the videos and round table/small group discussion of the various techniques modeled. Key points pertinent to the type of therapy illustrated should be noted. All journal entries are confidential; there may be a voluntary sharing of entries or discussion of one's own entry. These will be collected each day at the end of class and returned the following morning. They are to be recorded either in a blue examination book and should not exceed more than one page in handwritten form, or can be typed and should be one page double spaced. PLEASE DATE EACH ENTRY.
3. Development of a personal theory of marriage counseling/therapy: Using the theoretical and practical elements that you believe are most valid from your previous studies and the material covered in this class, each student is to write a paper that summarizes their present theory and planned method for doing marriage counseling. Unless you are already engaged in professional counseling, it is understood that this will be a beginning theory, which you will refine as you gain experience. The body of the paper must be 12 to 15 pages in length, written in APA style (5th Edition). Minimum of 12 resources is required. This does not include any of the textbooks. Please balance your resources between journal articles, books, on-line resources, and those found in hard print. Adherence to APA style is mandatory. This will be reflected in your grade.

IMPORTANT: Include in your paper, your beliefs about the nature of human beings and human behavior. Your beliefs about the nature of change and how to bring it about as well as your personal view on marriage and the spiritual aspects of marriage need to be addressed. Paper should be a synthesis of your personal conceptualization of effective therapy, substantiated by research and tied to a theoretical construct. Paper should be a well thought out, personal, road map that indicates to the instructor, how the student will approach marital therapy.

Paper must include: Theory of the conditions necessary to have a healthy marriage; theory of what causes marriages to deteriorate, and how student plans to conduct marriage counseling. Paper needs to be a blend of your personal theory, backed by research and proven methods of intervention. The overriding goal of the paper is to assist you in formulating a work-a-able, results-oriented, approach to marriage counseling. This is intended to be a guiding framework that incorporates ones personality, spiritual emphasis and sound clinical theory and intervention. Grades will be assigned on the basis of overall presentation of material and adherence to APA requirements, which demonstrates an ability to write at the graduate level.

(If you are not a counseling student, and desire to use another writing format, see the instructor.)

Christian Marital Counseling: Eight Approaches to Helping Couples, by Everett Worthington, Jr. (1996) is a good reference book that identifies various approaches. It may be good a guiding framework to peruse.

PAPER IS DUE FOUR WEEKS FROM LAST DAY OF CLASS–Friday, July 25th 2008 by 3:00 PM.

4. Recommended Book List--Student will be required to formulate a reference list of books they would recommend to clients on the following topics. Two to three books or two books an audio/video tape should be listed for each of the following topics. These are all topics that regularly present in marriage and family therapy and a current recommended reading list is necessary for those in the counseling/pastoring ministry. Please list books that you will actually recommend. These can be books recommended by someone in the field of counseling, whose opinion you respect. This is intended to be a productive and meaningful assignment.
